Name: RAJAT   GANGULY
(First Name)   (Surname)

Introduce yourself in a brief paragraph:

Rajat Ganguly is a Senior Lecturer in the Politics and International Studies and Academic Chair of the Security, Terrorism and Counterterrorism Studies Program in the School of Social Sciences and Humanities at Murdoch University. He has written widely on ethnic conflict and South Asian politics and security. His current research projects focus on insurgency movements and counterinsurgency operations, ethnic secession in world politics, military and non-military approaches to conflict management, and the politics, foreign policy and security of South Asian states particularly India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka. His recent publications include articles in Small Wars and Insurgencies (2007), Nationalism and Ethnic Politics (2005), Third World Quarterly (2004), and Asian Studies Review (2001). He is also the author of Kin State Intervention in Ethnic Conflicts: Lessons from South Asia (Sage 1998); co-author of Understanding Ethnic Conflict: The International Dimension (Longman 2006, 2002, 1998) and Ethnicity and Nation-Building in South Asia, Revised Edition (Sage 2001); and co-editor of Ethnic Conflict and Secessionism in South and Southeast Asia: Causes, Dynamics, Solutions (Sage 2003). He has contributed several book chapters and serves as the Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of South Asian Development, a bi-annual peer reviewed international journal published by Sage India. Before coming to Murdoch, Rajat held academic positions at the University of East Anglia (UK), Victoria University of Wellington (New Zealand), Tulane University (US) and the University of Southern Mississippi (US).